How to prepare for university or college?

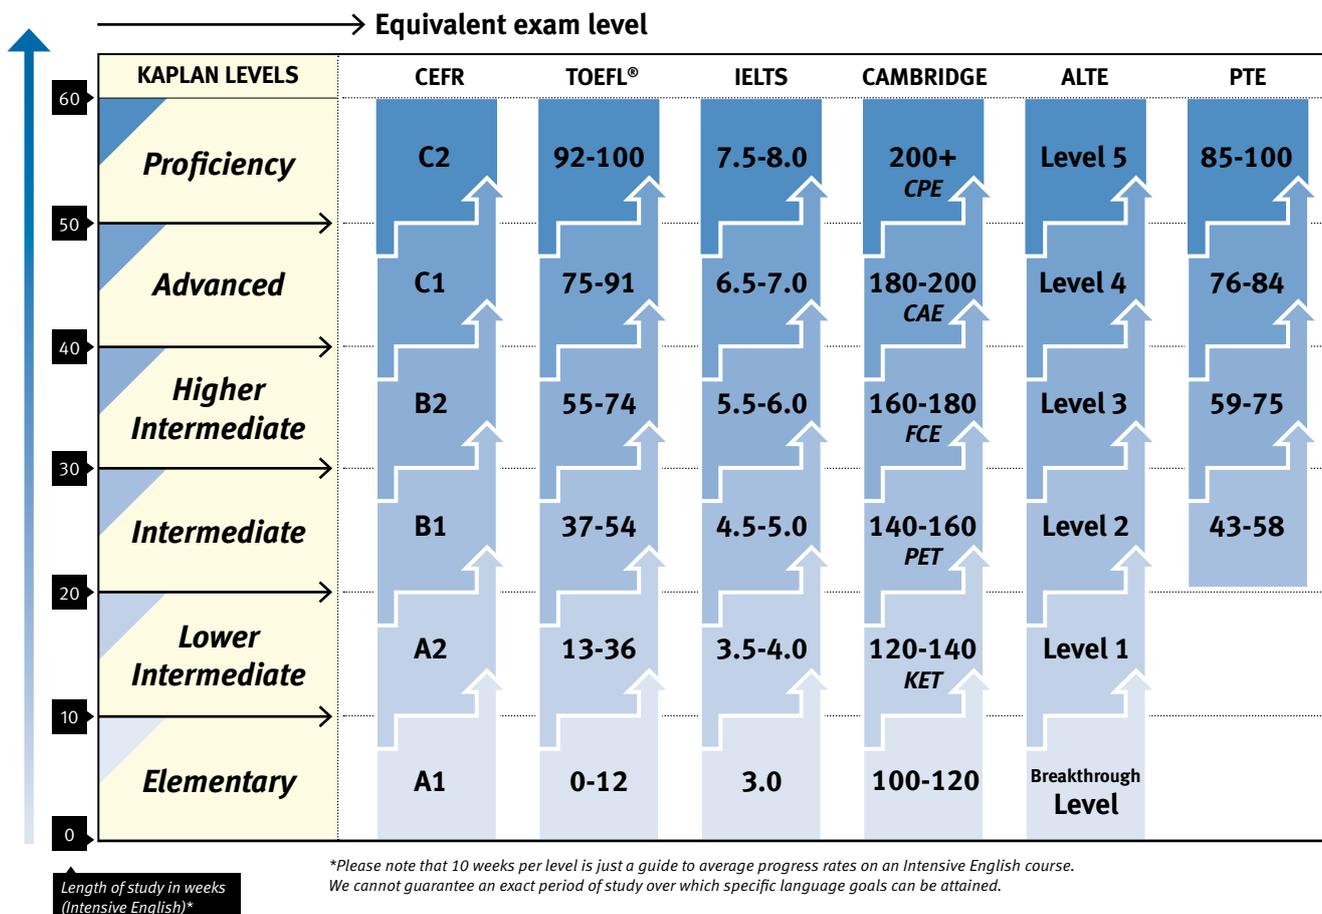

1. What do you want to study at university?

Selecting a program and institute takes time and consideration. If you have an idea of what you want to study, you should think about the type of ‘credential’ you want to achieve in Canada. Do you want to graduate with a diploma or a bachelor’s degree? Also think about the different types of education: in general college education is more applied and prepares you for a specific career, whereas university degrees are more academically focused.

2. What is your current English level?

Part of University Placement Service is a free pre-test to determine your level of English. Based on this assessment, Kaplan International estimates the time you need to improve your English to the required level for admission into university or college. Almost all our partners accept completed Kaplan International levels for admission into their programs.

3. Which Kaplan International program is best for you?

Our Vancouver and Toronto schools offer a variety of programs to help you improve your English skills. Depending on your English level and the university or college you want to enter, any of these three categories supports you in achieving your goal.
